Gregory J. Pepe

The primary settings to be discussed are consumer protection and payor-provider disputes when the insurance company is the defendant. The use of mediation, arbitration, and other potential dispute resolution modalities will be reviewed in context of frequency of use, settlement rates, definition of success and selection of neutrals.

Attorney Pepe practices in the areas of healthcare law, alternative dispute resolution, commercial finance and general business law. He advises a number of state and private medical societies regarding physician practice management issues within the context of organized medicine and managed care. Attorney Pepe also represents numerous physician groups, including large integrated practices, IPAs, PHOs, and others involved in healthcare law issues. The emergence of large healthcare provider groups and networks presages large and complex arbitrations when the parties have disputes. Within the arena of dispute resolution and mediation Attorney Pepe assumes the patient/provider perspective and works as an advocate for the patient or provider.
